Vitamins to VEGA!

18th. Mar. 2024

VITAMIN

01

The overall popularity of the vitamin market has increased this week, and many varieties have raised prices or stopped reporting. The VE factory has raised prices significantly earlier and recently announced a production suspension plan, and market transactions have gone up; VB1 and VB6 factories have concentrated on suspending reporting and signing, and have not resumed yet. B6 market feedback is calm, and VB1 customers are replenishing a small amount of goods; in addition, VA manufacturers have also stopped reporting. Sign, VB3 price increases slightly.

AMINO ACID

02

This week, the market for small varieties of amino acids is generally stable. For valine, factories have raised the quotations to promote market orders. Factories are in a strong mood to raise prices, and end users can replenish them as they use. Regarding factory orders and shipments, the arginine and isoleucine markets are relatively stable. The overall market demand is weak and transactions are low. It is expected that the market will operate smoothly in the short term, and we will pay attention to changes in market orders.

API

03

The API market has maintained a stable operation this week, with most varieties still at low prices. The prices of individual varieties are relatively strong due to the impact of raw materials and supply. The overall market demand is still average, with rigid demand purchases being the main focus. Due to demand, the prices of tylosin, doxycycline and florfenicol still dropped slightly last week, and are all at historical lows. The prices of neomycin sulfate, lincomycin hcl, and levamisole hcl are relatively strong due to supply, raw materials, etc.

FOOD ADDITIVE

04

This week, the food supplement market has maintained stable as a whole. The sweetener series products sucralose/ aspartame/ acesulfame potassium have stable prices and normal shipments; Creatine monohydrate has normal shipments. The price of preservative products sodium benzoate/ benzoic acid/ potassium sorbate and sorbic acid remains stable. The price of xanthan gum in Fufeng has been suspended and it is expected that the price will rise in the future. We will continue to pay attention to market conditions and the delivery status of each manufacturer.
